PEKING, October 21st, 1864.

SIR,—I am instructed by Earl Russell to acquaint Her Majesty's Consuls in China with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown regarding the liability of the Ship in disputes arising between merchants at Chinese Ports and the Captains of ships trading there, a question on which his Lordship had been requested to give a decision.

The Law Officers hold that any question between a merchant and the Captain of a British ship arising in China, which can be the subject of a civil suit, may be adjudicated upon by the Consul, and any judgment against the Captain may be enforced by distress upon the ship or other property belonging to himself; but cannot be enforced by the detention of any ship which is not his property. The ship's Certificate of Registry and her other papers cannot be detained for the purpose of enforcing any such decision in any case in which the ship itself is not liable to be distrained for the same purpose.

PROVISIONAL RULE for the conveyance of British Subjects sentenced to deportation to Hongkong from Ports not ordinarily in direct communication with that Colony.

WHEREAS by Articles XX and XXI of an order of Her Majesty in Council, dated June 13th, 1853, it is provided that British subjects sentenced before any of H. M.'s Consuls to be sent out of the dominions of the Emperor of China to Hongkong, shall be embarked on board any of Her Majesty's ships of war or any British vessel bound to Hongkong, and whereas at certain of the Ports of China opened by treaties or conventions negotiated since the date of Her Majesty's order in Council, it has been found difficult to embark persons so sentenced in vessels bound to Hongkong, the undersigned, in pursuance and in execution of the authority vested in him by Art. III of the same order in Council, as Her Majesty's Chief Superintendent of Trade for the time being, hereby makes the following Rule:—

Until the pleasure of Her Majesty's Government shall be further declared, it shall be in the power of any Consul or Consular Officer Acting as Consul at any port in China, to send any British subject duly sentenced to deportation as above, to whatever intermediate port shall appear to him to possess the greatest facilities for the transmission of the persons sentenced to Hongkong; and it shall be lawful for the commander or master of any British vessel bound to such intermediate port, to receive any such person on board, under the usual warrant addressed to the Chief Magistrate of Police of the Colony of Hongkong, and to convey him in custody to the port to which the vessel is bound, and on arrival to deliver him with the warrant to the Consul or Consular Officer Acting as such at the said port; and the Consul or Consular Officer aforesaid shall grant him a receipt for his prisoner and for the warrant, and shall detain the prisoner in custody until a suitable opportunity for sending him to Hongkong shall present itself, and shall then forward him thither in the manner pointed out in Article XX of the order in Council before cited. And this provisional rule shall farther apply to all cases wherein British subjects may be sentenced by Her Majesty's Consuls to imprisonment at Hongkong, as provided by Art. XXV of the same order in Council.

IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1864.

IT is singular that, notwithstanding its material weakness, the Chinese government contrives to maintain unimpaired the suzerainty over neighboring states which it acquired in former days, under more energetic emperors. The Tale-lama of Thibet, though nominally the chief authority, is actually subject to the civil governor appointed from Peking, and through Thibet all the Indo-Chinese races on the Himalayan frontier are kept under Chinese influence. Bhootan pays an annual tribute, and Nepaul is believed to continue to acknowledge to the present day the supremacy asserted by Kien-lung after he had repelled the Goorkha invasion of Thibet. Siam continues to send its tribute of rice, and the Corea acknowledges such complete subjection that, as appeared from a recent announcement in the Peking Gazette, its sovereigns are crowned by Chinese delegates. Not the least singular instance of the influence which the empire still exerts, is the fealty acknowledged by the kingdom of Liu-chiu, of which also proof was given in a translation from the Peking Gazette which appeared in the North-China Herald of the 28th May. The tribute-bearers from this island sovereignty had, it was stated, arrived in Chekeang and begged to be permitted to proceed to Peking to salute the present, and worship the manes of the departed, emperor. Formerly, the Liu-chiuan envoys proceeded to the capital as a matter of course, but in the 10th year of Hsien-fung, and since the accession of Tung-chi, the route has been closed by rebels, and by the alteration in the channel of the Yellow River which has destroyed the Grand Canal in its neighborhood, and they have been debarred from the inestimable privilege of prostrating themselves at the feet of the brother of the sun. Now, however, that the districts bordering on the latter stream have again been reduced under the imperial sway, a return to the former custom has become possible, and the Peking Gazette to which we allude, mentioned that the emperor had referred the pressing request of the envoys to be allowed to visit him, to the decision of the Board of Rites, with the remark that it appeared reasonable. The report of the Board of Rites was not made public; but a few weeks ago, some gentlemen travelling along the Grand Canal towards Hungchow met five large boats, containing the persons of the Liu-chiuan ambassadors and the arrears of tribute, on their way to the capital. While professing to concede an interview with the emperor as a favour, the Chinese government could not adopt a more certain method of maintaining their prestige and impressing the Liu-chiuans with a sense of their power. To people accustomed to the narrow limits of their own islands, the journey of several weeks duration through the heart of the empire, cannot fail to convey an exaggerated idea of its extent and power, and of the hopelessness of any attempt to cast off their allegiance, should the idea of attempting such a step occur to them. But the Chinese government is not the only one to which, if the imperfect information which can be obtained on the subject may be credited, the prince of the Liu-chiu owns fealty. The prince of Satsuma is believed also to claim an authority over him, more direct even than the emperor of China; and the propinquity of the Liu-chiu islands proper to Japan renders it extremely probable that he does so. It would be equally easy for Satsuma to take possession of one of this group as a material guarantee, as for China to exert moral pressure on one of the Mudjicosimabs, in case the prince of the Liu-chiu showed signs of insubordination; the former group being as near Kagosima as the latter to Foochow.

THE new provisional rule for the conveyance to Hongkong of British subjects deported from places which possess no direct communication with the South, will, when carried out, prove a very great boon to the Yangtsze and northern ports. Hitherto the number of European settlers at the smaller places open to trade has been so limited, that it has very seldom been found necessary to inflict the punishment of deportation. But now that the disbandment of the disciplined forces has cast a large number of unemployed Europeans into the midst of the foreign communities, any difficulty which might possibly arise in getting rid of such as may prove objectionable, should be carefully guarded against. We need only take a short stroll through the settlements in order to prove most satisfactorily that a very large body of destitute foreigners is in existence, and that no adequate means of employment is at hand to afford it relief. Up to six months ago, such a sight was never seen in Shanghai as a foreigner begging his bread, but now unfortunately it has become only too common. Men with misery inscribed on every lineament, sue for alms and relate heart-rending tales of destitution and hardship. Want is so often the exciting cause of crime, that we need not be surprised if the poor fellows who throng our streets are compelled to resort to violence in order to obtain food. To many of them perhaps this mode of subsistence would not be new. Amongst the destitute class now residing here, there is doubtless a strong desperado element. But there are also many who would be glad to obtain a respectable subsistence did any means of so doing present itself. This section of the distressed class claims our most active sympathy, and imposes a heavy responsibility upon us. It is not necessary for us to enter on the discussion of any plans by which European labor might be made to supersede Chinese labor, so far as to relieve the necessities of the men to whom we now refer. The thing could be easily done, and in the interests of humanity as well as of self-protection, we trust it may be done. Meanwhile the smaller ports, in proportion to their size, will suffer from the presence of unemployed foreigners, and will find themselves subjected to all the evils which are likely to accrue from the existence of a totally destitute class, without possessing the same opportunities of giving employment, and thus saving the sufferers from those vicious courses to which wretchedness so often leads. Failing any honest means of support, the nature of the country and the habits and manners of the people afford facilities for obtaining by violence that subsistence which is denied by the peculiar circumstances in which the sufferers find themselves. We can therefore expect nothing but the perpetration of various outrages on the native population, robberies and violence will become rife, and the foreign name will in all probability be brought into discredit by the unprincipled conduct of a few individuals. Under these circumstances it may become in the highest degree necessary that the punishment of deportation be rendered certain in its effects. There should be no delay involved; the criminals on arriving at Shanghai from—for instance—Tientsin, should be instantly taken over by the local consular authorities, and consigned to safe keeping. Otherwise the terms of the sentence may be evaded, and the ends of justice defeated. But while referring to the excellence of the rule which thus provides for the safe keeping of inveterate offenders, we cannot but enlarge on the advantages to be derived from the establishment of some system by which the energies of these unemployed foreigners might be directed into proper channels. The highest aim of criminal legislation is to secure the adequate punishment of the offender, but we, both as philanthropists and as strict utilitarians, are bound to attempt the Prevention rather than the Punishment of crime. The object is a nobler one, the result more in accordance with the higher instincts of our nature. We never succeeded in reinstating one who has fallen into crime by punishing him; indeed the necessary act of punishment causes him to sink still deeper and more hopelessly into guilt. Instead, therefore, of securing the infliction of the penalty of crime, we should be glad to see the need for crime as a means of subsistence done away with, by the organisation of any plan which would secure work of some kind to every one who finds himself in destitute circumstances. This, if carried out, would prove far more exalted charity than is mere almsgiving, and would have the best possible effect on the morals of the men so rescued from the inevitable consequences of misury and temptation.

SUMMARY OF THE WEEK.

THE report received last Saturday from Chefoo relative to the total wreck of H.M.S. Racehorse, and terrific loss of life, threw a gloom over the settlement during the early part of the week. From the accounts with which we have been favored it appears that on the evening of the 4th instant, the vessel was proceeding under steam, hoping to get into Chefoo harbor before midnight. The evening was very hazy, and when a little to the east of Lung-mun harbor, which seems to have been mistaken for the entrance to Chefoo, the Racehorse went ashore and was soon completely wrecked. A heavy gale set in within a short time after she struck, and prevented any effectual means being taken to secure the safety of the crew. Out of one hundred and eight officers and men who were on board at the time, but nine were saved, viz:—the Commander, Paymaster, boatswain and six sailors. H.M.S. Rattler left Shanghai on Sunday last to visit the wreck, and endeavor if possible to save some of the stores. The rescues which we reported in our last issue were continued on Saturday and Monday. The result will be found in another column. The Australian Dramatic Company still draw large houses, and keep well up to the standard of excellence which they assumed on their first appearance. During the past week the following pieces have been put on the stage:—Married Life, Wonder, Hard Struggles, and the Burlesques—Cinderella and Conrad and Medora. The "hit" of the week was the prison scene from King John, in which Miss Julia Edouin and Mr. Birch appeared. The acting was perfect, Miss Julia Edouin doing the fullest justice to the character of Prince Arthur, and indeed taking the house by storm. The performances this evening will be for the benefit of Miss Tilly Earl, whose fame has become well established in Shanghai. On Monday last the tug steamer General Ward, which sank on the 21st ult., in consequence of the bursting of her boiler, was raised by the Messrs. Robinson and Mr. Noland. She was announced for sale by auction this day. The report of the Volunteer Autumn Rifle Meeting, held on Monday and Wednesday last, will be found published elsewhere. On the evening of the 11th instant, a Cantonese gentleman named Ko, alias Chên, who had long been suspected of complicity in the various outrages committed by native rowdies in the settlements, was arrested, and carried into the city with five or six of his employés. His confession has been published, and a sketch of it inserted in our Daily of the 15th instant. It would seem that he was the head of a well-organised body of about one thousand men, whose livelihood was derived solely from rapine and violence. He and nine others, whose guilt was well proven, were executed on Tuesday last at the Chino Chun, outside the South gate of the city. The Christy's Minstrels are enjoying a very successful season. Their houses are well filled, and their very excellent endeavors to contribute to the gaiety of Shanghai have met with the appreciation they deserve.

The English Mail of September 25th, with telegraphic dates to October 3rd, arrived on Thursday last, the 17th instant, per P. & O. steamer Cadiz. The news had been received on the previous day per Glengyle.

We have been furnished with a memo. relative to the state of the CHEKEANG province, and more especially to the condition of the country round Hangchow. The latter city is very ruinous, and the neighboring districts present the same appearance of desolation which marks the spots occupied by the rebels in Keangsoo. Cultivation has but just commenced. Mulberry trees flourish to the exclusion of almost every other useful growth, but even on these no care is lavished.

From NANKING we learn that Tsêng Kuo-fan has left that city, and repaired to Lookchow in Keang-peh to crush an insurrection which has broken out there. It is said that on his return he will be recalled to Peking for the purpose of taking his position as president of the Board of War, while Li Hung-chang who now temporarily fills his post, will be confirmed in the Governor-generalship. The acting Futai-ship of Keang-soo is for the present held by Wu, late Tsao-tai. We are also informed that a pitched battle has been fought between the Rebels and Imperialists at Kuang-sing-fu, in the province of Kuangsi. The Yu Wang is said to have been captured, and a cousin of the Tien Wang's, by name Hung Yuan-chêng, killed. The loss on both sides seems to have been heavy, but the Imperialists finally won the day.

Our correspondent at HANKOW announces another threatened attack by banditti. The foreign residents place little credence in the constantly recurring reports of danger with which the officials endeavor to terrify them. H. B. M. Gunboat Hardy has, however, been sent up for the purpose of ensuring the safety of the settlement.

Our advices from TIENTSIN and PEKING report that at the latter city the foreign residents got up a very successful Rifle Match, a report of which is this day published. Amateur Theatricals have also been set on foot, and have drawn large houses—comprising every foreigner in the city. The natives anticipate that the river will close about the 12th proximo.

From NAGASAKI we learn that the line of defences erected some time since on the hills which surrounded the town and settlement are being continued much to the disgust of the foreign residents. The latest YOKOHAMA papers report that the Nepaul has been beached, and repaired sufficiently to admit of her being sent to Hongkong to be docked.

THE AUTOGRAPHIC DEPOSITION OF CHUNG-WANG, THE FAITHFUL KING, AT HIS TRIAL AFTER THE CAPTURE OF NANKING.

Subsequent to this, Chang-kuo-liang crossed the river at the head of a large army, and again invested the two Pu, and although communication was partially maintained with Nanking, still the most important route was closed. The pressing state of affairs induced me to urge Ch'ên-yu-ch'êng to come down to my relief, and he arrived by way of Lu-chow and Liang-yuan. Lu-ho was besieged by a large army under one of Chang-kuo-liang's generals, a Kuang-si man named Choo. Being unsuccessful in our first attack upon his troops, we withdrew to Yang-chow, with the feigned purpose of besieging that place. General Chu had then upwards of 40 intrenched camps outside the east gate of Lu-ho, and our object was to make a feint on Yang-chow, so as to draw off part of Choo's force, and then suddenly wheel round and cut them off.

Our plan was complete, for Choo detached part of his force to the relief of Yang-chow, and our reserve division suddenly interposed and prevented their return.

After this Chang-kuo-liang detached a reinforcement of men to their assistance, but in one fight at Ling-tzu-kow we routed them, and under cover of the night thoo raised the siege of Lu-ho, after suffering severe loss. We then pushed on with our victorious columns to P'u-kou, where we stormed the entrenchments of the Imperialist general Chow, and for five or six days engaged Chang-kuo-liang and Chang-yu-ling. Chow, seeing the want of spirit amongst his soldiers, knew that it was impossible to hold out, and therefore retired to the edge of the river, being unable to retire any further. We were now enabled to open communication with the city, and thus for the fourth time we had in part succeeded in succouring it.

After the capture of P'u-k'ou and Loongan, intelligence was received of the movements of Hoo-peh troops in the neighbourhood of Huang-mei and Soo-sung, and that Ngan-hui was in danger. Ch'ên-yu-ch'êng was therefore ordered to the rescue, and I left alone to hold P'u-k'ou. The capture of the two P'u not having been carried out completely, increasing signs of a change began to betray themselves. I occupied P'u-k'ou for a long time under difficult circumstances. I had no rations to issue to the men, and the chances of success outside seemed slight. The troops of Ho-ch'un and Chang-kuo-liang were all in fine condition, and I had none that I could bring forward to cope with them. In addition to this we had no gunpowder, and at home there was no good man at the head of the government. The Tien-wang preserved his air of unconcern for all outward matters, and as usual relied throughout upon heaven. He did not think of enquiring about military affairs or governmental matters, and I was left to get out of my dilemma at P'u-k'ou in the best way I could. To make matters worse, suspicions were entertained that I intended joining the Imperialists, and my brother and wife detained in the city as hostages, in addition to which my men were forbidden to enter the city. I was then in correspondence with Li-chao-show, and the Tien-wang when he heard of this became apprehensive, and to secure my fidelity and guard against my change, conferred in me the title of the Faithful Prince. I myself was really ignorant as to the cause of the honour being conferred on me. I suffered much oppression and unpleasantness at this time, but being a Kuangse man and distant 300 miles from home, I saw no channel open for escape. My men being men from Canton, and from the same province as myself, were in a similar predicament, and so we were obliged to put up with our troubles. Now that my career is drawing to a close, I can but express a hope that ere long the people will enjoy peace, and that I may be excused for uttering apparently idle words. I will now resume with my narrative from the time that I was in difficulty at P'u-k'ou.

Chiangpoo was now closely beleaguered. The whole of the road above was occupied by Chang-kuo-liang's forces, and the aspect was so generally threatening as to induce me to return to the capital and memorialise the Chief.* This I did, but I obtained no satisfaction whatever. I asked the Chief from what quarter he could expect to obtain help if I were retained at Hoo-k'ow. I went over the names of the different ministers and gave him every information where they were and what they could do. Chên-yu-ch'êng was at Chien-t'ai. Huang-mei or Su-sung fighting with the Hoopeh troops, and could not leave his position. Wei-chih-tsun had given in his allegiance to the Imperialists. Liu-kuan-fing, Lai-wên-hung and Ku-lung-sien were useless.

Yung-fu-ch'ing was somewhere in the neighbourhood of T'ung-lin and likewise being assailed by General Tsêng's troops. The left division under Li-shih-sien was in the neighbourhood of Nan-ling and Wan-chih.

Although Nanking was at this time closely besieged by Ho ch'un and Chang-kuo-liang, and the city but scantily supplied with provisions, the Tien-wang would not consent to my leaving in order to procure succour outside. The emergency of the time led me to be rather strong language, and I received a rebuff in consequence. The Chief neither issued orders nor did he trouble himself at all about military matters but as before trusted in providence for everything, and this was about all he did. I had, therefore, no alternative left but to represent matters once more, and urge the absolute necessity of my quitting the city to obtain external aid. The Tien-wang seeing that he could not stop me, finally consented to my leaving, and as soon as I had handed over my command at Puk'ou to Huang-szu-lung and Ch'ên-tsan-ming, I proceeded direct to Wuhu. Before four days had elapsed, the stockades outside P'ukou had all been carried by Chang's troops and Chin-fu-chow * had likewise fallen. Nanking was now closer besieged than ever, —and this its fifth siege was being carried out by Hochun and Chang-kuo-liang. The place was as secure as if an iron band had encircled it, but fate had decreed that it should not fall that time. The breath of the heavenly dynasty was not yet extinguished, on the contrary a new impulse as it were diffused itself through the people's minds. I issued circular dispatches to the commanders of the different stations, and found them all ready and willing to acknowledge me as general, and from this time the labour and responsibility of relieving Nanking devolved wholly upon me, and I had to meet all difficulties with a good will and determination. At the present day every one is acquainted with the name of the Chung-wang, Li-siu-ch'êng. A great deal of money was distributed by me among military officers irrespective of the force to which they belonged, and I also in a great measure relieved the people in distress; it is on this account that the people both within and without the capital acknowledge me, and not because I had any talent to recommend me or because I was more favoured by the Tien-wang than any other, for the Chief's right hand man was the young Hsi-wang, Hsiao-yeu-ho, then came the eldest brother, then the second brother, then the Tien-wang's two fathers-in-law, Chang and Huang, then the Ying-wang, and lastly came Siu-ch'êng, who took over the Ying-wang's affairs after the death of that chief. The siege of Nanking was now progressing, and events assuming a more threatening appearance daily.

On the 2nd of the 1st moon of the 10th year (1860), I issued out of Wu-hu at the head of my troops and marched to Nan-ling, crossed over to the Ch'ing-tou headland, and thence over to Shui-tung by the high bridge at Ning-kuo. The Imperialists had taken every precaution to prevent my attacking that place, but much to their surprise, I passed on direct to Kuang-tê-chow, which I reached in 48 hours. I attacked and carried this place and handed it over to Ch'ên-k'un-shu and Ch'ên-ping-wên. With Tan-shao-kuang † and two others I then pressed onwards to Szu-an, where we were met by Chang-kuo-liang's troops. These we engaged and defeated and then took the place. Subsequent to this we were joined by the forces under Li-shih-hsien, and made a combined attack upon Hoo-chow. This place not requiring many men to attack or garrison it, I left the affair to be carried out by my cousin, and proceeded at once to Miao-si, thence to Wu-k'ang, and in 24 hours reached Hangchow, having then only six or seven thousand men with me. The five gates of Hangchow were speedily invested, and before four days we gained an entrance through the Ch'ing-po gate. The capture of the city was not effected by the strength of man, but accomplished by a divine dispensation, as 1250 men only were present at the attack. It was not my intention originally to attack Hangchow, but seeing that Ho-chun and Chang-kuo-liang were besieging my Chief and my mother in Nanking, and knowing that the two generals derived their supplies from Hangchow, Soochow, Kiangsi, Fokien, and Kuangtê, I made this extraordinary move with a view of drawing off part of their beleaguering force, and then intended by a surprise to compel them to raise the siege. We had several battles with the Manchoo garrison after we had entered Hangchow, and made a long time before we were victorious. Soon after this Chang-kuo-liang did detach part of his army under Chang-yu-liang to save the city. On their arrival at the Wu-lin gate, we gained the information from them that they were part of the Kiangnan forces, and thus we knew that our plan had succeeded admirably. On the morning after their arrival, I made a great display of flags on the city walls in order to induce them to retire in the belief that our numbers were formidable. Strange to say success again came to our aid, the enemy retired and for 24 hours made no attempt to enter the city, —meanwhile I was enabled to retire unmolested. Then—in those days—the Heavenly dynasty was not doomed to be destroyed and stratagem succeeded; now that its days have been accomplished stratagem has failed. From the commencement to the present time this man * has been in charge of affairs, and our failure and loss of the capital is likewise owing to our sovereign's ill luck, and the increasing prosperity of the Imperialist government in thus completing their successes. Here for the present I will leave this subject, and resume with full details of the evacuation of Hangchow for the relief of the capital, and with the subsequent defeat of Chang-kuo-liang and Ho-ch'un; after which I will enter into more matters anent the capital itself. After our retreat from Hangchow, we crossed over to Lin-ngan from Yu-liang, rounded the T'ien-mu hill, and coming out by Hsiao-fung we reached Kuang-tê. We were in consequence in advance of Chang-yu-liang. The predatory nature of that general's troops, coupled with the wealth afforded by Hangchow, deterred them from quitting that place immediately, be-ides this, Kuangtê is only 100 miles from Nanking, while Hangchow is at least 260 or 300 miles, and by the indirect route over 340 miles, so that Chang-yu-liang was too late to afford any assistance.

Our relief of the capital at the period to which I am now referring was mainly owing to providential aid, as, without providence, we should not have been able to accomplish such an important end. Yang-fu-ch'ing had already been called upon to co-operate in the rescue of the capital, and had reported to Chien-p'ing. Liu-kuan-fang, Lai-wên-hung and Koo-lung-sien had likewise been summoned and were at the same place. The meeting happened as opportunely as it did on a previous occasion, when a similar one was held at Szu-ming hill. Our council of war terminated, we each took our respective routes. Yang-fu-ch'ing proceeded to the attack of Kao-yuan and Tung-pa, Li-shih-sien was detached for the capture of Li-yang, and Liu-kuan-fang likewise went in the same direction. Success met us everywhere. Hoo-ch'ing took Li-shui and the Choo-ling pass. The Shih-wang (Li-shih-sien, assaulted and carried Chu-jung. I came across the Ch'ih-sha hills, without making any conquests on the route, and went straight to Hsing-huang. Here I met Ho-chun's and Chang-kuo-liang's forces strongly intrenched in ten camps, but my cousin fortunately coming up, we made a combined attack on them, and after a great battle defeated them and entered Hsiung-huang without further molestation. The next morning I approached by the T'u hill, and the Foo-wang through Ko-ling-kuan advanced towards the South gate.

The Ying-wang had some time previous to this withdrawn his troops from Chien-t'ai to Chiang-pu, and met us without any agreement. Knowing that my troops were on the South shore he crossed over from the West Pillar, and by way of Kiang-ning (chên) reached T'ou-kuan. All our troops having arrived, the next thing was to commence operations. I took up my position at the back of Chin-shan near the Yao-fang gate Ch'ên-k'un-shu approached by the Kao-ch'iao gate and the Shih-wang by the Hung hill. The Foo-wang took up a position at the Yü hua-t'ai. The Ying-wang came by the Pan and the Shan bridges. Ho-ch'un's and Chang-kuo-liang's troops were so shut in that the front was unable to succour the rear and the rear the front. Chang-yu-liang, who had taken a fine body of troops with him to Hangchow, had not returned, and was therefore cut off. The Imperialist supplies from Soochow, Hangchow, Fokien, Kuangtô and Kiangse were obstructed, and hence they were hard up for provisions in the camp. Our forces being numerous at this time we were enabled with one blow to relieve Nanking—this for the sixth time. Although the siege was raised and the camps of Hochun and Chang-kuo-liang destroyed, the Imperialists did not suffer much loss but withdrew the whole of their force to Tan-yang and Chinkiang. Only 3,000 or 5,000 of their men were killed, but numbers deserted to Soochow and Changchow, and on the route plundered and robbed the people to such an extent that they were much incensed against them. Our influence at this period was rapidly advancing, and with such brilliant successes smiling on us who could have foreshadowed the future condition that we should come to at the present day?

* I imagine the Chung-wang here refers to the Tien-wang, as he qualifies the sentence by a succeeding is likewise.

Peking Rifle Meeting.

Our Peking advices contain an account of a Rifle Meeting held there on the 27th ult., a report of which is appended. The day was all that could have been wished, the Chinese authorities lent their parade ground for the occasion, and the natives mustered in vast crowds to witness the proficiency of the foreign marksmen. All the foreign residents turned out in full strength, and Their Excellencies Ch'ung Lun and Hêng-ki of the foreign office, likewise put in an appearance. The ground was kept clear by bodies of drilled Chinese, and an excellent tiffin was provided for the invited guests. So much for the accessories. The firing was as follows:—

1.—F. R. St. John, Esq.

The second prize in the Ministers' Cup was then shot for by Messrs. Murray and Man, and won by the former gentleman, who made a centre at 100 yards, Mr Man making an outer at the same distance. The meeting thus terminated, without accident of any kind, and besides giving all concerned in it a very pleasant day's amusement, proved that the foreigners in Peking are not only on the best possible terms one with another, but that they are determined to keep up European pursuits even in the midst of the Chinese capital. We Shanghai settlers can no longer boast of being the sole representatives of English civilisation and the sole supporters of English sport in the Far East. The few lonely residents in Peking are determined to emulate all our efforts, and gain a well founded reputation for securing enjoyment under the most unfavourable circumstances.

Shanghai Volunteer Rifle Meeting.

The weather, on both days of the contest was as fine as could be desired by spectators, though probably the competitors would have preferred a cooler and more cloudy day. The heat was excessive considering the lateness of the season, and even in the forenoon caused a slight haze in the atmosphere. In the afternoon the sun, by shining directly in the faces of the competitors, must have seriously inconvenienced them. The first prize shot for was the All Comers' Cup, which was won by Mr. Carnie, S.V.C, who shot with a Whitworth rifle which he won at the last contest. The following were the three highest scores.

Shanghai Races.

Although the racing on the fourth day was of a more irregular character than on the three preceding days, the sport was none the less good. Three races only had been announced, and one of them, the Combination Stakes, did not come off; but matches and scratch races were got up, which raised the number to a level with that of the preceding days. The first race run was,

A Sweepstakes of 25 taels each and 100 taels from the Fund, for all China Ponies. Weight for inches as per scale. Distance 3 miles.—Professionals not allowed to ride.

Magic.....1.
Ozone.....2.

Nine ponies had been entered and six came to the post. At the commencement of the race Core took the lead and kept it for a good while. Eventually, however, Magic and Ozone drew ahead, and a neck and neck race ensued in which Magic won by about half a length.

Combination Stakes of 50 taels each. A Steeple Chase for all Horses. 3 miles, Arabs, 9st. 7lbs. Stud bred, 10st. Colonial, 11st English 12st.

This race did not fill; but in its place a flat race of a quarter of mile was got up, which gave Cobweb an opportunity of adding to his renown.

Cobweb.....1.
Tartar.....2.

Cobweb won easily. Tartar a fair second.

A hack race was then got up, for which ten horses with gentlemen riders came to the post. Distance, once round. Bravo, ridden by Mr. Baker, came in first; Mr. Lent a good second.

A match between the ponies Nelly and Effort came next.

Nelly.....1.
Effort.....2.

Match.—Twice round the pony Steeple Chase course. Between Nugget and Gabriel Junks.

Gabriel Junks.....1.
Nugget.....2.

Fortune seemed at first to smile upon Nugget, but his obstinacy in refusing one of the jumps told sadly against him, while Gabriel Junks took most of his leaps gallantly. Coming round the second time, Nugget's prospects seemed to brighten, for Gabriel Junks for a short time refused one of his fences. He cleared it, however, at length, though not till Nugget had reduced the distance which separated them till only one jump intervened between them. After this he went on well and came to the winning post quite fresh, if we may judge by his rider finding it impossible to pull him up or prevent him from cantering about at his own discretion.

Elfin Knight.....2.

Elfin Knight refused the first hurdle and his rider did not continue the race, so Souter Johnny had it to himself and went over the course, taking all the hurdles in gallant style.

On Monday a private match between Mr. Beam's Bk. G. P. Mrs. Gamp, and Mr. Kyle's B. C. P. Cossack came off. Distance ¼ mile.

Cossack.....1.
Mrs. Gamp.....2.

Time 29 sec.

Cricket.

We subjoin particulars of the first Cricket Match which has taken place between the Hankow and Kiukiang communities, and which has resulted in the victory of Kiukiang by 22 runs. It is hoped that it will now become a half yearly Meeting. Hankow was unable to send down two of its best Cricketers, or perhaps the result of the game might have been a different one. However, a pleasanter match or weather more propitious to the contest could not have been had.

The Bhootanese.

At the present crisis a few remarks on the weapons and mode of fighting practised by the Bhootanese, as observed during the last Sikkim expedition, may perhaps not be out of place. Every man in the country is armed with a long straight knife, about 2 feet to 2 feet 6 inches in length, and called kan in the Lepcha language, ahaha or chongri in that of the Mechis who inhabit the Terai portion of Bhootan. These knives are used for all purposes, both for cutting wood, clearing jungle and every other use to which such a weapon can be put. They are heavy, and with one stroke a Bhootea will cut down a thick branch from a tree. They are worn suspended to the side in a wooden sheath. Nearly all of these people, the lower orders especially, have bows and arrows, with which, however, they do not make very good practice, but the arrows for warfare are almost invariably poisoned with some vegetable poison in which they put great reliance. We have, however, seen men wounded by them, who being attended at once, by having the wound quickly washed, experienced no inconvenience from the poison. Still it is probable that if it had time to circulate with the blood in the system, it would prove fatal. A few of the Bhootanese are armed with matchlocks procured from the Thibetans; these, however, are unwieldy weapons, as they have a prong-like rest attached, which folds under the barrel and on which the piece is steadied when fired. Their powder, too, is none of the best. The bullets are generally hammered bits of lead or iron, rarely cast. The method they have of making stockades is a good one. Two rows of bamboos, about a yard apart, are firmly planted in the ground, and the interior filled up with earth or stones, small loop holes being left about the level of the ground, or a few inches higher. The earth to fill up the space between the bamboos is taken from a ditch which is dug inside, and when completed, there is often a ditch also on the outside. Men in the inside ditch can, therefore, fire without exposing more than just their heads. The ground outside the stockade is planted with small bits of bamboo, sharpened and hardened in the fire, pointing outwards, which would run into the feet of native troops attempting an escalade. The stockades are generally not more than fifteen to twenty feet in height, and the three feet of earth and bamboos is generally sufficient to stop a musket ball. But in places where artillery would be expected to act, these ramparts would probable be found much broader. They trust more to the nature of the country than to their weapons; wherever practicable, they form a wall of booby trap, which is generally very effective. In places where the path scarps the side of a steep hill, they collect on the top of it huge rocks and stones, which are placed on bamboos hung just over the edge, so that on any troops passing along the path below, the rope is severed and the warning to "stand from under" is more easily given than obeyed. Such a descent of rocks is quite enough to throw the best troops into confusion, and when backed up by a fire of musketry, is rather an uncomfortable ordeal to undergo, for either retreat or advance become impossible, and the only alternative seems to be to wait until a rock rolls one down the khud. They are very fond too of throwing temporary barricades across the paths, they cannot be called roads, and covering them with green jungle, so that when a column of troops approaches, perhaps two or three abreast, they receive a volley, and on looking for the perpetrators, who immediately dive into the jungle, cannot of course see them in the dense vegetation. Poisoning the springs of water too, is not an uncommon occurrence, and when troops, after a long day's march, arrive at a spring—the only one for miles—it is, to say the least of it, not pleasant to be deprived of the means of either cooking or quenching one's thirst.

The following quotation from a paper by Dr. Campbell, the late Superintendent of Darjeeling, published in the Journal of the Asiatic Society for 1855, will give a good idea of the amount of assistance the Bhootanese could get from Thibet, even if afforded.

Notes on Eastern Thibet—Army.

"They have no artillery in Thibet; the cavalry so called is mounted on ponies; the principal troops are Infantry and great pains are taken to make them good marksmen. Prizes and promotion are the invariable rewards of good marksmen. The Chinese or Tartar troops art kept quite distinct from the Thibetan ones, which are only a militia called out when required, and not regularly paid. The imperial troops quartered in Thibet do not exceed 4,000 men, and the Thibetan army is not so strong. There are 2,000 imperialists at Lhassa, 1,000 at Digarchi, 500 at Giautchi, and detachments at Phari and Tingri. The last named is on the high road from Kutmandhu to Lhassa, and is situated on a plateau, called the "Tingri maidan," by the Nepalese. The imperial troops are armed with long matchlocks to which a rest is attached. The Thibetans have very few firearms, being provided with bows and arrows, and short swords. The powder is of a very inferior description, and it does not appear that the troops are ever practised in the military manœuvres."

A Chinese soldier is very highly paid in Thibet, getting as much as 15s. 12 to 16 per mensem. The Thibetan soldier has no regular money pay. He is allowed the Government share of revenue on portion of land, his own farm or another, and this does not exceed 40 or 50 Company's rupees per annum. A little saltpetre for the manufacture of gunpowder is procured in the country, but the regular supply goes from India. When attacking, the Bhootanese raises a terrific war shout, which is intended to strike a panic, and is more like the unearthly yells of wild beasts than of human beings. They are easily able, owing to their familiarity with the country, to hide in, and creep through the densest jungle, such as would be considered impervious by Europeans, but in this they are quite equaled by the Gorkhas, who hide them with a right good will, owing to some old feud. Where the ground is at all open, and an attacking party cannot approach under cover, they sometimes protect themselves with roughly hewn planks some 6 feet in length by 4 in breadth and 5 or 6 inches thick. By carrying these in front of them, they gradually advance, firing as they go. The most common defensive weapon, however, is a round shield made of rhinoceros hide and musket proof, and the leaders are often seen with iron or brass helmets, surmounted with the rough hairy skin from the neck of the antelope, which is supposed to increase the ferocity of their looks.

Few words of warning are required from us, to guard against the cunning of these savages, for the time is past when a "Dugald Cratur" could mislead a column into defiles so dangerous as those of Bhootan, but there are many other forms of guile which these people will readily enough resort to in order to circumvent the enemy. If the force we have seen reported is that which is really to be sent, we cannot sufficiently lament the absence of Europeans in its formation.—Englishman.

CAUTION.

ELLWOOD'S PATENT AIR-CHAMBER HATS.

The Patentees having established the validity of their Patent, in an action tried on the 20th and 21st days of June instant, in the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, before Lord Chief Justice Erle and a Special Jury, in which Ellwood and another of No. 24, Great Charlotte Street, Blackfriars Road, in the Borough of Southwark, Wholesale Hat Manufacturers, were Plaintiffs; and Christy and others of No. 35, Gracechurch Street, in the City of London, also Wholesale Hat Manufacturers, were Defendants; and the Jury having by their Verdict found, that the above named Defendants had infringed the Plaintiffs' Patent, and that the Invention was new in England and in India, at the date of the Letters Patent. We, the above named Plaintiffs, do hereby give notice to all Manufacturers, Dealers in, and Sellers of Hats, Caps, or Helmets, that we shall proceed by Suit in Chancery, against all persons so manufacturing, dealing in, or selling Hats, Caps, or Helmets, constructed on the principle of "ELLWOOD'S PATENT AIR-CHAMBER HAT;" unless the previous consent of the Patentees be obtained, at the same time reserving to ourselves the right of taking proceedings against prior Infringers.

Dated this 24th day of June, 1864.

From "The Times and Daily Papers," June 21st and 22nd, 1864.

INFRINGEMENT OF PATENTS.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS,
WESTMINSTER, JUNE 20TH AND 21ST.
(Sittings at Nisi Prius, at Westminster, before the Lord Chief Justice ERLE and a Special Jury.)

ELLWOOD AND ANOTHER v. CHRISTY AND OTHERS.

Mr. Hindmarch, Mr. Webster, and Mr. T. Ashton were counsel for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Bovill, sir G. Honyman, and Mr. Murray for the defendants.

This was an action for the infringement of a patent for a double ventilating solar hat made for India, of which the plaintiff was the assignee.

The plaintiffs are hat manufacturers in Great Charlotte-street, Blackfriars-road, and the defendants are in the same way of business in Gracechurch-street. The invention was thus described in the specification of the patent:—"Each hat is composed of two parts, leaving a space or chamber between them, so that in hot climates the heat of the sun acting on the exterior of a hat shall not pass to the head of the wearer, but be greatly modified by the non-conducting properties of the air in the space or chamber. This space may be either closed, or it may have passages for air to enter and also to pass away."

The defendants pleaded "Not guilty," traversed that the plaintiff was assignee, and alleged that the invention was not new.

The jury, after considering the matter for an hour and a half, found that the defendants had infringed the plaintiffs' patent, and that the principle of the patent was new in 1851, both in England and in India.

Verdict for the plaintiffs.

GABRIEL.

INVENTIONS AND PATENTS.

EACH year adds almost innumerably to the list of Inventors, and still more to that of inventions which are increased by a most uncommon multiple. The fruitful ingenuity of thousands of intellects thus contributes to the comfort, convenience, and profit of the community, whilst of a necessity it also numbers the victims of too flattering hope, or of too sanguine a calculation. The list of Patents, active, passive, or neutral—vital or still-born,—productive or exhaustive, swells to enormous proportions, but never without more or less advantage from the faculties which it awakens or calls forth, if but for a brief interval into active ply. Every invention confers some good upon the world. And those which tend to supply some great want, or to relieve some great inconvenience, deserve at our hands so much the more commendation, that they cannot be called into existence at our bidding. Amongst those patented inventions which have appeared to illustrate this eventful year, and to figure in the great International contest of ingenuity and industry, though many be more showily represented and more conspicuously marshalled before us, none meets with more personal sympathies than that of the new Osteo-Eidon produced by Messrs. GABRIEL, the celebrated Dentists of London, Liverpool, and Birmingham, (as it is evidenced by their being the only dentists chosen on the Committee of the International Exhibition), whose admirable adaption of artificial Teeth has obtained so high an approval from the profession as well as from the public. The Osteo-Eidon as a base for sets of teeth, obviates all objections applicable to other materials, and whilst firmly seated in the mouth, and free from noxious elements, dispenses with all need of mechanism, and presents an appearance not to be distinguished from that of the natural gums and teeth. Messrs. GABRIEL announce that they submit their laboratories and manufactures to gratuitous inspection during this season. As may be seen by reference to our advertising columns, Messrs. Gabriel supply Artificial Teeth and Gums on their patented system, irrespective of distance.
